

decided to do so. In the request for reconsideration, Charging Party raised no newly discovered information. Neither did Charging Party claim that previously unavailable information which would have altered the majority's decision had become available. In these circumstances and in the interest of preserving the finality of the Board's decisions, I concur in the decision not to grant reconsideration.

Jerilou Cossack Twohey, Member